1. Due to their shortages of coal, the Hungarians are experimenting with the manufacture of oilcakes based on the trials carried out by the Rumanians. The residue left over from the oil after refining is mixed with coal dust and used for heating boilers. In view of the greater calorific contents of this fuel (more than 7,000 calories) the boilers become worn out sooner than by using ordinary coal. 25X1
2. Experiments have been carried out in turning the coal of Komló into coke. Experiments in the laboratories proved satisfactory but turned out to be unsuccessful in actual production. Due to new methods in washing the coal, better results are expected.
3. New trial drillings have been carried out with success in the area of Egerszalók (4752 N 2019 E). 25X1
